Religion, State & Society is a peer-reviewed journal and is the only English-language academic publication devoted to these issues in communist and formerly communist countries. The journal reflects the conviction that the experiences of religious communities in their encounter with communism are central to the evolution of the new Europe and of the western world in general. Tackling social, cultural, ethnic, political and ecclesiological problems is a cooperative effort, in a way hitherto impossible, involving the religious communities of both East and West. Religious communities in Western Europe, the USA, Australasia and Latin America have much to learn from the way in which their counterparts in the East have tackled such problems in the past, and vice versa. RSS will continue to monitor the experiences of religious communities in communist and formerly communist countries throughout the world. It will also serve as a forum for debate on issues of global concern, with input from both East and West.

Contributions are welcome addressing any issue covered by the title of the journal and placing the discussion in the context of the East–West encounter in its traditional or contemporary form. Articles of up to 7000 words are invited. Longer contributions will also be considered. Please send manuscripts to the Editor: Dr Philip Walters, Religion, State & Society, Keston Institute, 38 St Aldates, Oxford OX1 1BN, UK.
